 The city of 's-Hertogenbosch is one of the oldest cities in the Netherlands, and is located in the south of the country. 's-Hertogenbosch was build as a fortified city, and that heritage can still be seen also today. Apart from Flik-Flak the city houses the Dutch champions Rugby, Professional football and hockey clubs. All in all i tis a real sports city.*

 's-Hertogenbosch is the home for Stichting Flik-Flak, one of the largest gymnastics organisations in the Netherlands. Flik-Flak focuses on innovation and sports participation for all. It house various disciplines within the gymnastics sport such as Acrobatics, Male Artistic Gymnastics, Female Artistic Gymnastics and Trampoline. These disciplines are offered to all age groups and levels. In 2008 the center build a completely new building for its gymnastics, with over 10.000 m² of flooring specifically* designed for gymnastics. This gives them the opportunity to have specialized halls that focus on a specific discipline. The building was designed around its purpose and equipment, giving the opportunity to maximize the facility.

There are various halls in the facility that allow specialized training. Apart from the various training facilities the center also has a conference and meeting room in the building. This makes it possible to not only have practical workshops and trainings but also theoretical options for workshops. There is a wide variety of technological possibilities in the facility as well. Think of a time of flight machine, but also various video and analyses programs to make sure that every aspect of the routine can be tracked and analyzed.

The trampoline hall is equipped with safety belts and have safety pits, one open and one closed, that will allow the opportunity to practice even the most difficult jumps. For the tumbling track the center has a safety belt on rail. Furthermore there are placed two double-mini trampolines in the facility. The entire trampoline hall has a total of 13 large trampolines.

All trampolines are positioned in one hall, making sure all the equipment is accessible for the group without having to switch halls. The warming-up can be done in different areas, on top of that the center has a special fitness room to keep up the physical strength.

All in all the facility that Flik-Flak has to offer is in one word unique, having all the necessary equipment, space, technology and relaxation in one building.
